GARFIELD is uneasy.

TALMAGE is "doing" the slums of San Francisco.

The interest manifested in Dr. TANNER is on the wane.

The demonstration on Saturday night was a very creditable one and the democracy feel highly elated over it.

They have found that the ENGLISH forecloses mortgages. About March 4, 1881, he will foreclose one on the vice-presidency.

What a contrast! Gen. HANCOCK remaining at his post attending to his duty, and Gen. GARFIELD junketing about the country trying to drum up votes for...

...who will never...

The American people...

...stands confessedly guilty of a mis-

...manner that calls for punishment by imprisonment and fine.

From the west comes the statement that the maddest men on the continent to-day are they who paid twenty-five cents to see two greasy old tramps in Kansas City, and took them for the BENDERS.

This venerable couple arrested in Nebraska on suspicion of being the BENDERS have proved not to be the BENDERS, and the people of Exhite county, Kas., are loudly denouncing them as impostors. But it is not their fault, nor fraud, that they were mistaken for the historic murderers. They themselves protested that they were not, but witnesses, who pretended to have known the BENDERS, positively declared they were the desired parties, and the public, eager to hear something, whether true or false, about the murderers, swallowed the hoax without an effort. However, the sensation has served the purpose of giving us a knowledge of the real fate of the BENDER family. They were confederates of a gang of horse thieves and robbers who operated in Kansas several years ago, and their house was a rendezvous for the gang, as well as a death-trap for unsuspecting travelers; and the story that they were murdered by these horse thieves on their flight from Kansas, to prevent them from giving information about the operations of the gang, is reasonable that it will have to be accepted, at least until the real BENDERS shall turn up to refute it.

Running Away With a Saw.

This is what Judge TAYLOR seems to be doing in his canvass for congress, and the funny part of it is that he is fooling himself with the idea that he is carrying a saw-log on his shoulders. But he is mistaken. It's only a straw he is striding off with.

Let us see. In his campaign speech that he has repeated so often since it was first delivered at Lagrange that it must have grown as familiar to him as "my name is Nerval" is to most boys, the Judge proposed that the voters of this district should lay aside all thought of everything else and turn their whole attention to the way people in some states were voting the democratic ticket to the exclusion of every other. If the Judge has so far made any other case or called attention to any other fact affecting the public interest that he proposes to change, we have neither seen nor heard of it. If he proposes any other measure or to introduce any other policy than simply to so arrange matters as that democratic votes shall not be cast as freely in some states as republican votes are cast in others we have not heard of it. This is the mole-hill the Judge is trying to magnify into a mountain, the straw that he has mistaken for a saw log.

We concede to the judge a high order of ability in the way of making things appear otherwise to careless observers than they really are; but we think he vastly over-estimates his capabilities in this direction when he attempts to make the voters of the Twelfth Indiana congressional district, who in all past elections have voted the democratic ticket by large majorities, think they ought now turn about and vote against it, without some better reason for it than that people are almost unanimously in favor of it in other parts of the country.

Instead of this hopeless task we respectfully invite the judge to turn his "splendid abilities" in some other direction, and to exercise his genius in a more promising field. If he be fond of doing hard tasks simply for the excitement and fun of doing them we would invite him to an exposition of his candidate's record in the Credit Mobilier and DeGOLYER matters, and explain to an impatient district why it was that he swore that he "never owned, received or agreed to receive any stock of the Credit Mobilier or of the Union Pacific railroad, or any dividends or profit arising from either of them," when Judge POLAND, Mr. MCGRARY, and Mr. BANKS, all leading republicans, concur in swearing that to the best of their understanding of all the testimony in the case he did do just what he swore he did not do.

If the judge will just lay down his straw (as we think it) or his saw log (as he thinks it) long enough to satisfy these discrepancies, we may listen to him with the greater confidence in other matters—even to the extent perhaps of believing that he really ran off with a saw log instead of a straw.

His Civil Record.

[From Gen. Chambers' Yonkers.]
The Republicans say that Hancock has no civil record. It is true that Hancock was never a politician, that he never held a seat in either house of Congress, and that he was never elected by the people to any civil office. But when accident made him the governor of Louisiana and Texas he displayed a knowledge of the true principles of constitutional liberty which the most profound constitutional lawyer might have admired.

As Cromwell, who never drew a sword until he was 40 years of age, surpassed all the military men of his day who had studied the military art under Gustavus Adolphus and De Vere in the best schools of Europe, so Hancock, who had never practiced the arts of the politician, stepped at once to the front rank of political leaders. Clear in intellect, quick in perception, honest in instinct and cool in judgment, he stands to-day the equal of any man in America in a just conception of the true principles of constitutional government. His speech in Washington city when about to assume command of the Fifth Military District is a model of gubernatorial eloquence. His General Order No. 40 is a terse and comprehensive bill of rights in itself which surpasses the Magna Charter of Old England in this—the one was wrung by conquering Barons from a reluctant king and the other is the free-will offering of a conqueror to a conquered people. His letter to Pease, the tyrant of Texas, is a rebuke to official insolence which Junius might have admired, and is at the same time a declaration of the true principles of our government which Thomas Jefferson never excelled. His letter to Grant and Sherman when they sought to treat him with official indignity in New Orleans is an exhibition of that lofty scorn of tyrannical power which marks the free-born American gentleman. His letter to Mr. Glover, of St. Louis, is a manly declaration of his faith in the democratic party, and his letter to Sherman on the election of 1876 is a great state paper, worthy of the better days of the republic, and which shows him to be not only a man of political information, but an active mind which looks ahead, which masters great questions as they arise and determines his action on mature reflection. His letter of acceptance and all his writings stamp him as one of those rare men in political life who have never yet made a mistake.

GARFIELD GUILTY OF A STATE PRISON OFFENSE AND INELIGIBLE TO THE PRESIDENCY.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, the republican candidate for the presidency, is upon his own confession guilty of a state prison offense and has rendered himself, upon conviction, ineligible to the office to which he aspires—indeed, ineligible to the office he holds or any other office under the government! He admits that he labored with the "Boss" SHERIDAN government of the district of Columbia to procure a pavement contract for a Chicago firm, and received a fee of $5,000 for his services. Whether Mr. GARFIELD actually rendered the service of "brief" in procuring the contract, as he claims, or simply used and sold his influence as a member of congress and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is not material. For the purpose of this article the version of the DE GOLYER business given by GARFIELD may be conceded to be true. Now read the following provision of the Revised Statutes of the United States, section 1782, page 316, passed in 1834, GARFIELD himself being a member of congress at the time.

Section 1782. No senator, representative or delegate, after his election and during his continuance in office, and no head of a department or other officer or clerk in the employment of the government, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly, for any services rendered or to be rendered to any person either by himself or another, in relation to any proceedings, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other matter or thing in which the United States is a party, or directly or indirectly interested, before any department, court martial, bureau, officer, or any civil, military or naval commission, whatever. Every person offending against this section shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than two years, and fined not more than $10,000, and shall, moreover, by conviction thereof, be rendered forever thereafter incapable of holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the government of the United States.

That GARFIELD is guilty of most flagrant violation of this law of the land, in both his letter and its spirit, no one will have the hardihood to deny:

1. He was said to be a representative in congress.
2. He agreed to receive and did receive, directly, $5,000 for services rendered in procuring a contract from the government of the district of Columbia for a wood pavement firm. How he procured the contract is in this connection of no sort of consequence, but as a matter of fact it is well enough to here quote the testimony of J. CHITTENDEN, the firm's agent who hired and paid GARFIELD, as he gave it in the course of correspondence at the time:

The influence of General Garfield has been secured by yesterday, last night and to-day's labors. He carried the purse of the United States—the chairman of the committee on appropriations—and is the strongest man in congress and with our friends. My demand is to-day not less than one hundred thousand more—a two hundred in all. Everything is in the best shape, the connections complete, and I have reason to believe satisfactory. * * * I can hardly realize that we have General Garfield with us. It is rare, and very gratifying. All the appropriations of the district come from him.

3. In the contract the United States were both directly and indirectly interested, for one of its provisions:

An additional amount of fifty thousand square yards will be awarded you (the contractor) so soon as the board are reimbursed by the General Government on account of expenditures around the public buildings and grounds, or you (the contractor) will be allowed to say it this season if you can wait until an appropriation (by congress) is made for this purpose, at three dollars and fifty cents per square yard.

Not only, in terms, was the entire value of this contract for $175,000 worth of work, $37,500 of which was clear profit according to sworn evidence, contingent upon an appropriation by congress, but, in fact, it was contingent upon the official action of GARFIELD as a representative in congress and chairman of the house committee on appropriations, with which committee all appropriation measures can alone originate. And what renders GARFIELD's offense still more aggravating, is the further fact that the entire government of the District of Columbia, as everybody knows, is by the constitution made the creature of congress, and "Boss" SHERIDAN'S Board of Public Works, from which GARFIELD procured the contract, was a special creation of congress in the formation of which GARFIELD participated, and the existence of which depended upon his will and the will of his party followers, who at the time were in a majority in both houses of congress.

The case is clearly made out against GARFIELD. He is guilty—grossly guilty, of the crime specified in the law. He has incurred the penalty of imprisonment and fine, and disqualification for office, provided in the law. The withdrawal of GARFIELD from the Presidential race is only a question of time.

Had Enough of It.

A western editor, whose style of writing was calculated to arouse people to deeds of gore, being himself not much on his muscle, found it necessary to keep a fighting editor, and he had a speaking tube connected with his healer's room to call him when danger required. One day a gentleman whom the editor had referred to as a "cross-eyed dromedary," came in to request a correction, and as the fighting editor was out, he didn't respond to the signal of distress, and while the editor and his visitor were on the floor under the desk the former agreed to correct the mistake, and the male man left. Pretty soon a gentleman from the rural district came in to give the editor a big squab and got a notice, and about that time the fighting editor returned, and a boy in his room told him that the boss wanted help. The man of war was quick to respond, and dashed into the chief's room, and seeing the latter in a somewhat disordered condition—the result of his previous visit—he thought the countryman was the cause of it, and clinched him; and after stifling up some furniture, ran the victim across the street to where an empty hearse was standing in front of an undertaker's shop. Into the vehicle he jumped the farmer and shut the door. The commotion he had created scared the horses attached to the hearse, and they started off on a dead run. People soon noticed the runaway and ran after it, and were shocked at beholding the hearse collide with a post and become a complete wreck; and their horror at seeing a human body precipitated to the sidewalk was only equalled by their amusement at seeing it spring nimbly to its feet and take off across the country yelling murder. They thought it was an attempt to bury a man alive, and part of them went to get the undertaker to lynch him; while the rest pursued the farmer, who was found hiding in a swamp. And after he was brought in it took over three hours to get matters explained, and then the farmer went before a justice of the peace and made affidavit that he hoped to be struck by lightning if he ever entered a newspaper office again.

A Seaside Picture That Will be Readily Recognized.

Kind reader, didst ever see two women bath? They emerge from their bath-houses looking as though they had stolen something, and expected to see a burly policeman bob around the corner, clap his hands upon them, and exclaiming cry, "Now I've got you." Then they trip along half a dozen steps, not altogether like Dandridge or a sand-piper, but somewhat resembling both. Then one says, "Oh, dear!" and reaches down to pick a pebble out of her shoe, while the other takes the opportunity to yell like a pair of panthers, and then run back with all her might to the bath-house. Her mate, of course, doesn't get the pebble out of her shoe, but gets several more to keep it from getting loose. Then the screamers or tip-toes do it to the place and says, "What a fool I was!" The other comes down, having secured a new invoice of pebbles in transit, and screams, "What is it?" As it is nothing but a devil's apron-string and not a snake, the screamer again says, "What a fool?" They then laugh. But they keep their eyes about them, and each mouth is always ready to emit a scream. By this time they reach the water's edge. A penny roller is advancing. It breaks a little way out and as the line of foam is sent up the beach they turn and scamper with all their might. Then one says, "What a fool!" And the other replies, "I know it!" Then they take hold of hands, determined to do or die. And another wave makes them flinch and tremble and scream just a little, but they keep on till the water reaches to what would be their knees if they were men. Now they face each other, each holding the two hands of the other. Anybody who has seen the firemen at work on a hand-engine will understand the motion readily. They keep this up for five or ten minutes, talking like a brace of parrots all the time, till one of them screams with all her might and runs half way to the bath-house. She stops to remark that she knows she will die, and looking down sees the cause of her scare—a blade of seaweed tightly wound about her ankle. Spunking up courage again, they seek the water once more, and again the hand-engine manœuvre is repeated. Then one of them whispers: "There's a man!" And the other says, "I don't care one bit," and then runs with all her might to the bath-house. Then the one who has seen the man saunters slowly after, picking up a shell or two on the way, pretending to think there isn't such a thing as a man in creation. By-and-by they emerge from the bath-house, and ostentatiously display the key, towel, and bathing dresses, chatting in most voluble manner. "It was just lovely!"

Washington, D. C., August 16.—Indications: For Tennessee and Ohio valley, partly cloudy weather, occasional rain, easterly, possibly veering to southerly winds, stationary or lower barometer, generally higher temperature in the Ohio valley, and stationary temperature in Tennessee. For the lower lake region, clear or partly cloudy weather, variable winds, mostly easterly, stationary or lower barometer, generally higher temperature.

Use of Adversity.

You wore out your own clothes, you are not troubled with many visitors; you are exonerated from making calls, spongers do not haunt your table, itinerant bands do not play opposite your window. No one thinks of presenting you with a testimonial; no tradesman irritates you by asking, "is there any other little article to-day, sir?" You practice temperance; flatterers do not threaten your rabbi into your ear; you are saved many a debt, and lastly, if you have a true friend in the world you are sure in a very short space of time to learn it. Sold Silver and Silver plated ware, all plated ware, triple plated castors, card stands, knives, spoons and forks, six pieces tea ware four dollars, tea and dinner set of China, one hundred and six pieces of good crockery, only ten dollars, Students' lamps. Everything twenty per cent. cheaper for cash, than any other house. Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 8 West Columbia street, Sign Big Iron Dog.

Shocking Occurrence.

William Bolling, an employe in Bass' foundry, was severely burned upon the left leg and ankle Saturday afternoon between three and four o'clock, by the upsetting of a ladle of molten iron which he was wheeling through the shop. The liquid literally burned the flesh from his leg and the limb presented a shocking appearance.

Bolling was immediately conveyed to his home on Wallace street after the accident and medical assistance procured. But, withal, he is suffering terribly, but it is not expected that any permanent injury will result from the unfortunate occurrence. Bolling is a man about fifty years of age and has a large family.

THE BATTLE BEGUN.

Big Demonstration by the Democracy on Saturday Evening.

Ex-Gov. Hendricks opens the Campaign at the Academy of Music.

The Streets of the City Ablaze With Torches.

In point of numbers, enthusiasm and everything else, the democratic demonstration on Saturday evening was an immense success. Early in the evening Charles Kieser planted his gun on the greenward in the Court House yard and under his manipulation the little cannon was made to belch forth round after round with terrific report. When the shades of night began to fall and the twinkling stars came shyly out the streets of the city presented a decidedly lively appearance caused by the tramp of the different ward organizations as they bore aloft their flaming torches and proceeded to take up the positions assigned them in the procession. Mayor C. A. Zollinger, the chief marshal of the parade, ably assisted by his aids, Robert Blackburn, Harry Campbell, Charles F. Mubler, John Vordermark, Fred Schmuckle, C. Neireider and Frank B. Vogel, were to be seen on horseback as they formed and guided the procession which moved over the route as previously published in the SEXTON. The column was preceded by the City Band and the second ward club was accorded the right of procession. There were considerably over one thousand men in line and each of the several clubs carried transparencies which bore plain and pithy mottoes and inscriptions suitable to the occasion. At a few minutes past eight o'clock the chief marshal gave the word of command and the column began to move. The music was furnished by the City, St. Cecilia's and St. Mary's Bands and two drum corps, and along the route of procession the private residences of a number of enthusiastic democrats were handsomely illuminated. All along the route the sidewalks were thronged with people and at different points the procession was most lustily cheered, evidencing the fact beyond peradventure that democratic enthusiasm was abroad in the city to the fullest extent. On the First ward transparency was the bold declaration, "The First ward will give 300 majority for the Hero of Gettysburg!" On that of the Second ward was an elegant representation of a chicken cock and the announcement that the ward was good for 500 majority. "We are good for 200 majority," said the Sixth ward, while the Eighth ward asseverated that it was "good for 300 majority." "Hancock will be inaugurated in 1881," "The Battlefield is a Poor Field for General Garfield," "We Want no Pavement Swindlers" and numerous other inscriptions similar in import were to be seen adown the line.

As soon as the procession formed and the order of march was given vast crowds began to pour into the Academy of Music which was soon filled to its utmost capacity and standing room was at a discount. The interior of the building was handsomely decorated with flags and Chinese lanterns which produced a most brilliant effect.

On the stage were seated a number of prominent citizens, among whom were Hon. Wm. Fleming, R. C. Bell, Hon. Peter Kiewer and Gov. Brockmeyer. The audience after waiting good naturedly for some time began to grow impatient and gave vent thereto in stamping of feet and clapping of hands, while "the gods in the gallery" furnished the inevitable "cat-call."

Presently Gov. Hendricks, accompanied by Ex-Mayor Randall, A. F. Edgerton, Judge Potter and others, made his appearance and walked leisurely down the aisle. His appearance was the signal for repeated rounds of applause which were given with that enthusiasm which showed that Indiana's favorite son still holds a high place in the affections of the people of "old Allen."

When the party reached the stage Ex-Mayor Randall called the meeting to order and in a short but strongly put address stated the terrible struggle that the opening of the campaign inaugurated and exhorted all to stand by their colors. He then introduced in a few words the Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, who advanced to the front of the stage. He was vociferously applauded and it was indeed found difficult to restore tranquility, so great was the prevailing enthusiasm. The speaker said that he at first decided to take no active part in the campaign, but when the central committee invited him to speak in this city he felt highly gratified and gladly availed himself of the opportunity. He dwelt at some length upon the constitutional amendments and his governorship. He expressed himself as opposed to the registration law which he claimed would serve only as a cloak to conceal fraud. He mentioned Philadelphia with her registration law and pointed to the gigantic election frauds in that city as an argument to strengthen his position. While speaking of the action of the supreme court in regard to the constitutional amendments he paid a glowing tribute to Judge Worden of this city, who is a member of the supreme bench, and vigorously condemned those persons who would cast odium upon the judges of the supreme court by maintaining that their decision was brought about by party ties and affiliations.

The speaker expressed his determination not to discuss either the Cincinnati or Chicago platforms, as he stated that platforms could be made to suit any occasion. He denounced in unmeasured terms the fraud of '76, which resulted in the counting out of Tilden and himself, and the counting in of Hayes and Wheeler. While dwelling upon this point he was several times interrupted by such cries as "Why did you take it?" "Why didn't you fight it out?" etc. To these outbursts of enthusiasm the speaker paid no attention, but ably continued to denounce republican principles and practices. During his speech he was frequently applauded, and when he closed by expressing his belief that Hancock would be elected and inaugurated, the enthusiasm of the assembly knew no bounds. When he had finished Ex-Mayor Randall introduced Gov. Brockmeyer, who made a brief but eloquent speech. He was followed by Hon. A. P. Edgerton.

While the speeches inside were being made Messrs. Lowry, Hench and Bell addressed a large assembly on the outside who were unable to gain admission to the Academy. The speakers were frequently applauded and the utmost enthusiasm and good will prevailed throughout.

Taken all in all the demonstration of Saturday night was one of which "Old Allen's" democracy may feel proud, and showed conclusively that the party is harmonized and nothing stands in its way to a glorious success.

The meeting adjourned with three rousing cheers for Gov. Hendricks and three for Gov. Brockmeyer.

HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS

DOWN TO

OLD PRICES

The enormous and unnatural rise in all kinds of merchandise during the early part of the year led manufacturers to greatly increase their production. They turned out goods, and in many instances, employed two sets of hands, one to work at night and the other by day.

Suddenly advancing prices led most merchants into purchasing enormous stocks. Many firms have to-day on hand, bought at the high prices of the past few months, more goods than they will be able to sell in the next year. We are not in that boat.

We had no fault in the "boom." The doubling of prices we knew was not legitimate and could not last. We purchased only enough to carry us through the spring business.

We had not, therefore, a big stock to work off at high prices, but have sold our goods, and with the cash in our pockets, are now in the market buying at fearfully low prices the piles of new merchandise now being thrown on the market by speculators and manufacturers.

It will pay out-of-town people better this fall than ever before to come to Fort Wayne to purchase their goods of us. There will be even a greater difference than in former years between our prices and those of merchants in smaller towns, for our Department system, by which we crowd a dozen kinds of business under one roof and under but one set of expenses, enables us to retail goods at smaller profits than ever before attempted by any firm in the state.

We ask the patronage of every person reading this advertisement, and will endeavor to give them the best goods, at prices usually charged for inferior ones.

GARFIELD is uneasy.

TALMAGE is "doing" the slums of San Francisco.

THE interest manifested in Dr. TANNER is on the wane.

THE demonstration on Saturday night was a very creditable one and the democracy feel highly elated over it.

THEY have found out that ENGLISH forecloses mortgages. About March 4, 1881, he will foreclose one on the vice-presidency.

WHAT a contrast! Gen. HANCOCK remaining at his post attending to his duty, and Gen. GARFIELD junketing about the country trying to drum up votes for...

THE American people will never elect to the presidency a man who stands confessedly guilty of a misdeed that calls for punishment by imprisonment and fine.

FROM the west comes the statement that the maddest men on the continent to-day are they who paid twenty-five cents to see two greasy old tramps in Kansas City, and took them for the BENDERS.

THE venerable couple arrested in Nebraska on suspicion of being the BENDERS have proved not to be the BENDERS, and the people of Labette county, Kas., are loudly denouncing them as impostors. But it is not their fault, nor fraud, that they were mistaken for the historic murderers. They themselves protested that they were not, but witnesses, who pretended to have known the BENDERS, positively declared they were the desired parties, and the public, eager to hear something, whether true or false, about the murderers, swallowed the hoax without an effort. However, the sensation has served the purpose of giving us a knowledge of the real fate of the BENDER family. They were confederates of a gang of horse thieves and robbers who operated in Kansas several years ago, and their house was a rendezvous for the gang, as well as a death-trap for unsuspecting travelers; and the story that they were murdered by these horse thieves on their flight from Kansas, to prevent them from giving information about the operations of the gang, is as reasonable that it will have to be accepted, at least until the real BENDERS shall turn up to refute it.

Running Away with a Saw.

This is what Judge TAYLOR seems to be doing in his canvass for congress, and the funny part of it is that he is fooling himself with the idea that he is carrying a saw-log on his shoulders. But he is mistaken. It's only a straw he is striding off with.

Let us see. In his campaign speech that he has repeated so often since it was first delivered at Lagrange that it must have grown as familiar to him as "my name is Nerval" is to most boys, the Judge proposed that the voters of this district should lay aside all thought of everything else and turn their whole attention to the way people in some states were voting the democratic ticket to the exclusion of every other. If the Judge has so far made any other case or called attention to any other fact affecting the public interest that he proposes to change, we have neither seen nor heard of it. If he proposes any other measure or to introduce any other policy than simply to arrange matters as that democratic votes shall not be cast as freely in some states as republican votes are cast in others we have not heard of it. This is the mole hill the Judge is trying to magnify into a mountain, the straw that he has mistaken for a saw log.

We concede to the judge a high order of ability in the way of making things appear otherwise to careless observers than they really are; but we think he vastly over-estimates his capabilities in this direction when he attempts to make the voters of the Twelfth Indiana congressional district, who in all past elections have voted the democratic ticket by large majorities, think they ought now turn about and vote against it, without some better reason for it than that people are almost unanimously in favor of it in other parts of the country.

Instead of this hopeless task we respectfully invite the judge to turn his "splendid abilities" in some other direction, and to exercise his genius in a more promising field. If he be fond of doing hard tasks simply for the excitement and fun of doing them we would invite him to an exposition of his candidate's record in the Credit Mobilier and DeGOLYER matters, and explain to an impatient district why it was that he swore that he "never owned, received or agreed to receive any stock of the Credit Mobilier or of the Union Pacific railroad, or any dividends or profits arising from either of them," when Judge POLAND, Mr. MCCRARY, and Mr. BANKS, all leading republicans, concur in swearing that to the best of their understanding of all the testimony in the case he did do just what he swore he did not do.

If the judge will just lay down his straw (as we think it), or his saw log (as he thinks it) long enough to satisfy these discrepancies, we may listen to him with the greater confidence in other matters—even to the extent perhaps of believing that he really ran off with a saw log instead of a mere straw.

His Civil Record.

[From Gen. Chalmers' Yonkers speech.]
The Republicans say that Hancock has no civil record. It is true that Hancock was never a politician, that he never held a seat in either house of Congress, and that he was never elected by the people to any civil office. But when accident made him the governor of Louisiana and Texas he displayed a knowledge of the true principles of constitutional liberty which the most profound constitutional lawyer might have admired. As Cromwell, who never drew a sword until he was 40 years of age, surpassed all the military men of his day who had studied the military art under Gustavus Adolphus and De Vere in the best schools of Europe, so Hancock, who had never practiced the arts of the politician, stepped at once to the front rank of political leaders. Clear in intellect, quick in perception, honest in instinct and cool in judgment, he stands to-day the equal of any man in America in a just conception of the true principles of constitutional government. His speech in Washington city when about to assume command of the Fifth Military District is a model of gubernatorial eloquence. His General Order No. 40 is a terse and comprehensive bill of rights in itself which surpasses the Magna Charter of Old England in this—the one was wrung by conquering Barons from a reluctant king and the other from the free will offering of a conquered hero to a conquered people. His letter to Pease, the tyrant of Texas, is a rebuke to official insolence which Junius might have admired, and is at the same time a declaration of the true principles of our government which Thomas Jefferson never excelled. His letter to Grant and Sherman when they sought to treat him with official indignity in New Orleans is an exhibition of that lofty scorn of tyrannical power which marks the free-born American gentleman. His letter to Mr. Glover, of St. Louis, is a manly declaration of his fealty to the democratic party, and his letter to Sherman on the election of 1876 is a great state paper, worthy of the better days of the republic, and which shows him to be not only a man of political information, but an active mind which looks ahead, which masters great questions as they arise and determines his action on mature reflection. His letter of acceptance and all his writings stamp him as one of those rare men in political life who has never yet made a mistake.

GARFIELD GUILTY OF A STATE PRISON OFFENSE AND INELIGIBLE TO THE PRESIDENCY.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, the republican candidate for the presidency, is upon his own confession guilty of a state prison offense and has rendered himself, upon conviction, ineligible to the office to which he aspires—indeed, ineligible to the office he holds or any other office under the government! He admits that he labored with the "Boss" SHEPHERD government of the district of Columbia to procure a pavement contract for a Chicago firm, and received a fee of $5,000 for his services. Whether Mr. GARFIELD actually rendered the service of "brief" in procuring the contract, as he claims, or simply used and sold his influence as a member of congress and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is not material. For the purpose of this article the version of the DE GOLYER business given by GARFIELD may be conceded to be true. Now read the following provision of the Revised Statutes of the United States, section 1782, page 316, passed in 1864, GARFIELD himself being a member of congress at the time.

Section 1782. No senator, representative or delegate, after his election and during his continuance in office, and no head of a department or other officer or clerk in the employment of the government, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly, for any services rendered or to be rendered to any person either by himself or another, in relation to any proceedings, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other matter or thing in which the United States is a party, or directly or indirectly interested, before any department, court, martial, bureau, officer, or any civil, military or naval commission, whatever. Every person offending against this section shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than two years, and fined not more than $10,000, and shall, moreover, by conviction thereof, be rendered forever incapable of holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the government of the United States.

That GARFIELD is guilty of most flagrant violation of this law of the land, in both its letter and its spirit, no one will have the hardihood to deny:

1. He was and is a representative in congress.
2. He agreed to receive and did receive, directly, $5,000 for services rendered in procuring a contract from the government of the district of Columbia for a wood pavement firm. How he procured the contract is in this connection of no sort of consequence, but as a matter of fact it is well enough to here quote the testimony of CHITTENDEN, the firm's agent who hired and paid GARFIELD, as he gave it in the course of correspondence at the time:

The influence of General Garfield has been secured by yesterday, last night and to-day's labors. He carried the purse of the United States—the chairmen of the committee on appropriations—and is the strongest man in congress and with our friends. My demand is to-day more than one hundred thousand more—I was in the best shape, the connection complete, and I have reason to believe satisfactory. * * * I can hardly realize that we have General Garfield with us. It is rare, and very gratifying. All the appropriations of the district come from him.

3. In the contract the United States were both directly and indirectly interested. Here is one of its provisions:

An additional amount of fifty thousand square yards will be awarded you (the contractors) as soon as the board are reimbursed by the General Government on account of expenditures around the public buildings and grounds, or you (the contractors) will be allowed to pay it this season if you can wait until an appropriation (by congress) is made for this purpose, at three dollars and fifty cents per square yard.

Not only, in terms, was the entire value of this contract for $175,000 worth of work, $37,500 of which was clear profit according to sworn evidence, contingent upon an appropriation by congress, but, in fact, it was contingent upon the official action of GARFIELD as a representative in congress and chairman of the house committee on appropriations, with which committee all appropriation measures can alone originate. And what renders GARFIELD's offense still more aggravating, is the further fact that the entire government of the District of Columbia, as everybody knows, is by the constitution made the creature of congress, and "Boss" SHEPHERD's Board of Public Works, from which GARFIELD procured the contract, was a special creation of congress in the formation of which GARFIELD participated, and the existence of which depended upon his will and the will of his party followers, who at the time were in a majority in both houses of congress.

The case is clearly made out against GARFIELD. He is guilty—grossly guilty, of the crime specified in the law. He has incurred the penalty of imprisonment and fine, and disqualification for office, provided in the law.

The withdrawal of GARFIELD from the Presidential race is only a question of time.

Had Enough of It.

A western editor, whose style of writing was calculated to arouse people to deeds of gore, being himself not much on his muscle, found it necessary to keep a fighting editor, and he had a speaking tube connected with his heeler's room to call him when danger required. One day a gentleman whom the editor had referred to as a "cross-eyed dromedary," came in to request a correction, and as the fighting editor was out, he didn't respond to the signal of distress, and while the editor and his visitor were on the floor under the desk the former agreed to correct the mistake, and the irate man left. Pretty soon a gentleman from the rural district came in to give the editor a big squash and get a notice, and about that time the fighting editor returned, and a boy in his room told him that the boss wanted help. The man of war was quick to respond, and dashed into the chief's room, and seeing the latter in a somewhat disordered condition—the result of his previous visit—he thought the countryman was the cause of it, and clinched him; and, after striking up some furniture, ran the victim across the street to where an empty hearse was standing in front of an undertaker's shop. Into the vehicle he jumped the farmer and shut the door. The commotion he had created scared the horses attached to the hearse, and they started off on a dead run. People soon noticed the runaway and ran after it, and were shocked at beholding the hearse collide with a post and become a complete wreck; and their horror at seeing a human body precipitated to the sidewalk was only equaled by their amazement at seeing it spring nimbly to its feet and take off across the country yelling murder. They thought it was an attempt to bury a man alive, and part of them went to get the undertaker to lynch him; while the rest pursued the farmer, who was found hiding in a swamp. And after he was brought in it took over three hours to get matters explained, and then the farmer went before a justice of the peace and made affidavit that he hoped to be struck by lightning if he ever entered a newspaper office again.

A Seaside Picture That Will Be Readily Recognized.

Kind reader, didst ever see two women bathe? They emerge from their bath-house looking as though they had stolen something, and expected to see a burly policeman both around the corner, clap his hands upon them, and exultingly cry: "Now I've got you." Then they trip along half a dozen steps, not altogether like Dandredy or a sand-piper, but somewhat resembling both. Then one says, "Oh, dear!" and reaches down to pick a pebble out of her shoe, while the other takes the opportunity to yell like a pair of panthers, and then runs back with all her might to the bath-house. Her mate, of course, doesn't get the pebble out of her shoe, but gets several more to keep it from getting loose. Then the screaming tipsy doth to the place and says, "What a fool I was!" The other comes down, having secured a new invoice of pebbles in transit, and screams, "What is it?" As it is nothing but a devil's apron-string and not a snake, the screamer again says, "What a fool!" They then laugh. But they keep their eyes about them, and each mouth is always ready to emit a scream. By this time they reach the water's edge. A putty roller is advancing. It breaks a little way out and as the line of foam is bent up the beach they turn and scamper with all their might. Then one says, "What a fool!" And the other replies, "I know it!" Then they take hold of hands, determined to do or die. And another wave makes them flinch and tremble and scream just a little, but they keep on till the water reaches to what would be their knees if they were men. Now they face each other, each holding the two hands of the other. Anybody who has seen the firemen at work on a hand-engine will understand the motion readily. They keep this up for five or ten minutes, talking like a brace of parrots all the time, till one of them screams with all her might and runs half way to the bath house. She stops to remark that she knows she will die, and looking down sees the cause of her scare—a blade of eelgrass tightly wound about her ankle. Spunking up courage again, they seek the water once more, and again the hand-engine manœuvre is repeated. Then one of them whispers: "There's a man!" And the other says, "I don't care one bit," and then runs with all her might to the bath-house. Then the one who has seen the man saunters slowly after, picking up a shell or two on the way, pretending to think there isn't such a thing as a man in creation. By-and-by they emerge from the bath house, and ostentatiously display the key, towels, and bathing dresses, chatting in most voluble manner. "It was just lovely!" one remarks. And the other says she feels "so refreshed, you know."
